FINES FOR TWO GUILTY HACKMEN

Squire Harnish Gives Fine and Heavy Costs to Two Battlefield Guides who are Found Guilty of Violating Ordinance.

George J. Bushman and R. Frank Lott were arrested on Friday by Chief Shealer charged with violating the borough ordinance regarding the soliciting of tourists by hackmen. They were given a hearing before Squire Harnish Friday evening and this afternoon he rendered a decision of guilty, giving the defendants the minimum fine of $2.00 and adding the costs which amounted to between $11.00 and $13.00 in each case.

William Althoff was arrested on a similar charge on Friday but his hearing was postponed until this afternoon. The case against Mr. Bushman was first, Borough Solicitor While conducting the case for the town while George J. Benner, Esq., represented the defendants.

The story of the affair as given by Chief Shealer told of a tourist with his wife and two children having come in on the 9.15 train on the Reading. The man was immediately solicited and later, leaving his family on the platform, walked across the tracks to the Shealer corner. Mr. Bushman walking along and soliciting. At the corner the visitor was surrounded, Mr. Bushman being one of the crowd and being close to the fence during the happening, according to Mr. Shealer's testimony.

The officer's story was substantiated by testimony given by the following hackmen who were subpoenaed as witnesses, Joseph Galbraith, Leslie Vaughn, William B. Flemming and Moses Bair. All told practically the same story, Mr. Bair, when asked by Mr. While whether the tourist could have gone along easily if he had desired to walk up town remarking "The easiest way out would have been through the fence."

The testimony brought out the fact that there is unusually keen competition among the hackmen this year owing to the small tourist traffic and the men are even more eager than usual to get business.

Mr. Bushman in giving his version of the occurrence admitted that he might have been over the two foot limit while soliciting in front of the platform. He said that Chief Shealer had pushed back the hackmen and the tourist becoming alarmed had stepped back on the platform. At this juncture, Mr. Bushman said he started to walk away but was followed by the visitor who asked his price for the trip over the field, to be finished so that he could get away at one o'clock. "4.00" was the reply. "I'll give you $3.00" was the response. Mr. Bushman told him he could not do business at that price and walked on, when Tom Robison called in "I'll take you for $2.00."

Mr. Benner, in arguing the case for his client said that the prosecution had failed to show where the tourist was annoyed and inconvenienced by Mr. Bushman and called attention to that as one of the provisions of the ordinance. Mr. Benner claimed in his argument that the tourist would have been disappointed if he had not been given the attention the hackmen thrust upon him when he arrived. He also claimed that it made no difference how far over the two foot line a hackman went so long as he did not annoy or inconvenience tourists.

Mr. While in closing said that he felt the borough had made out a perfectly clear case, that the two foot violation had been clearly shown and that the man could not have got out of the crowd which surrounded him unless he had pushed through.

The second case called was that of R. Frank Lott. Chief Shealer testified that he followed the same tourist across the railroad tracks with his card and that, at the Shealer fence, he was one of those who surrounded the man and practically blocked the entire pavement. Chief Shealer said that he had frequently warned the hackmen about violating the ordinance but that they did not seem to appreciate it.

The testimony of the witnesses told of Mr. Lott's having been one of the soliciting hackmen in this special instance, two of the witnesses saying he was in the second line of solicitors surrounding the visitor.

Joseph Galbraith said during his testimony "The only way I can get business is by cutting prices and I'm going to do that from now on." He claimed that he "hacked independent ly."

Mr. Benner claimed that Mr. Lott did not come under the provisions of the ordinance as provided in the ordinance, Mr. While contending that a clear case had been made.

The hearing lasted for two hours and, as one of the principal witnesses in the Althoff case could not be present it was postponed.

TYPHOID ALL FROM ONE WELL

Nine Cases of Typhoid Fever in and about Gettysburg all Originated from Well at Leister Home. State Analyzes Water.

The nine typhoid fever cases existing in Gettysburg and close to the borough limits have been traced to one source, the well at the home of James Leister on the Baltimore pike at the foot of East Cemetery Hill.

Samples of the water from this well were sent by C. B. Hoffman, health officer of Cumberland township, to the state laboratories at Philadelphia where analysis showed the presence of the bacteria causing typhoid fever. There are five children ill with the disease at the Leister home, several of whom are convalescing. All of the other cases are known to have been at the Leister home where they drank water from the infected well.

The young child of John Thomas, a near neighbor, is ill with the disease. He had been accustomed to go to Leister's and while there drank water from the well. Levi Bushman, of Steinwehr avenue, helped Mr. Leister with some of his summer work and is a typhoid patient as a result of having drunk from the well; while Miss Rose Thomas living farther out on the avenue, beyond the borough limits, is also ill with typhoid. She had been helping at the Leister home.

Maurice Felix, of East Middle street, helped Mr. Leister with his summer threshing and is now ill at his home with typhoid fever while another man by the name of Smith, who also helped with the threshing, is said to have shown signs of symptoms of typhoid and went to a hospital.

The only cases of typhoid now existing in the town are those of Levi Bushman and Maurice Felix.

The Leister home was the scene of a typhoid fever visitation about twenty five years ago when the seven children of Amos Leister, father of James Leister, were ill.

CROPS ARE SHORT

Adams is one of the South Central Pennsylvania counties which have been hard hit in their agricultural products by the hot weather and lack of rain which have characterized this summer. Following a wheat crop which was hardly two thirds of the normal yield, it is feared that many other crops will be short. Farmers in Dauphin, Cumberland, York, Lebanon, Northumberland, Perry, Juniata, Franklin, Adams, Union, Snyder and Mifflin have been losers this year, and in some instances they barely secured enough for seed.

The decline in crops has been marked in the fruitful valleys in this region, and almost without exception the farmers tell stories of grain that was eaten by pests while on the stalk or which failed to mature, and of vegetables that were ruined by various diseases which were hard to check because of the poor start of the plants.

A. L. Martin, deputy secretary of agriculture, who receives crop reports from all section of the state, says that while the complete reports for this section are not in hand, he has seen and heard enough to convince him that things will be short.

The wheat in this part of Pennsylvania suffered from the depredations of the Hessian fly, which cut down the yield. Oats, rye and other grains were also short, and even alfalfa, which is coming into favor hereabouts, failed to come up to the standard. The hay crop was short.

The corn is exceptionally promising and most county farmers look for a big yield though there are some unfortunate ones.

The peach crop will be less than usual, but is not so badly affected. The apple crop is expected to be a record breaker.

BREAKS ARM IMITATING BENDER

Imitating the delivery of Bender of the Athletics, Jim Britcher, formerly of East Berlin, now living at York, sustained a fracture of the right arm above the elbow. The incident occurred at a camp along the Susquehanna river. "Here's the way the Indian makes them break," said Britcher. Winding his arm about his head three times, he threw the ball. His companions could hear the report made by the bone as it broke.

STATE ACQUIRES ITS FIRST ROAD

Road from Gettysburg to Harrisburg Taken over on Friday by State Highway Department. The First Road to be Acquired.

State Highway Commissioner E. M. Bigelow on Friday notified the commissioners of Adams, Cumberland and York counties and the authorities of the boroughs and townships through which the old Gettysburg and Harrisburg pike passes that he had taken over the highway for the state main highway system.

This is the first highway to be taken by the Commonwealth in the 8,000 mile system which is to be created, and is the first to be surveyed as a part of the network of fourteen or fifteen roads that will concentrate in Harrisburg.

The Gettysburg pike is now being surveyed by engineers under direction of C. W. Hardt, who are running levels preparatory to rebuilding and will afford a fine scenic route between this city and the battlefield, something that has long been desired by automobilists. Governor Tener went over the road recently.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

A convention of the Adams County Christian Endeavor District Number One was held in the Lutheran church at Wrensville on Wednesday. It opened in the afternoon with a song service led by Mervin E. Smith. Rev. Mr. Bussey spoke on "How to Get Endeavorers to Sign the Pledge" emphasizing the necessity of signing the pledge and the fact that no one was really a member of Christian Endeavor until he had done so. Recitations and song selections were given by Miss Lulu Wire, Miss Kate Breighner and Miss Grace Seiff of Littlestown.

Dr. T. C. Billheimer, of Gettysburg, in a brief address strongly defended the correctness of the Bible and said that the prominence given the Bible in Christian Endeavor meetings made him a strong advocate of the society. The afternoon session closed with an address by Rev. Prof. C. F. Sanders, of Gettysburg, who contrasted character building and character reforming, calling attention to the nobility of the latter but the great preference of having character properly moulded early in life.

In the evening a permanent organization was effected with D. M. Hoffman, of Wrensville, president; Charles Wolf, of Mount Tabor, vice president; Miss Bertha Hoiges, of Bigler, secretary; William Heller, of Mount Tabor, treasurer. Biglerville's invitation to hold the next convention there was accepted.

The addresses of the evening were made by Rev. D. T. Koser, of Arendtsville, who spoke of the benefit to be derived from such a convention and by Prof. Sanders who gave ways to obtain voluntary work in the society.

RESTORED LOST CHILD

Charles S. Mumper was the means of restoring a lost baby to its distracted parents, Friday evening, when he returned the two and one half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Riley to his home at the junction of Confederate avenue and the Emmitsburg road.

The little tot had strayed westward about a mile from his home on the Confederate Avenue and was wandering aimlessly about when Mr. Mumper came along. He took the boy into his wagon and made inquiries in the neighborhood but could find no one to claim him until he reached the Riley home. Mrs. Riley, who had searched over their property for her son, was just starting down the avenue when the happy reunion took place.

GIRLS, HAVE NO FEAR

In order to promulgate and further conservative courtship it seems necessary to deny the story, of a wild cat having been seen on Culp's Hill, which appeared in these columns a few days ago. The Times has been reliably informed that since the appearance of the above mentioned article it is next to impossible to induce any attractive girl to go for a stroll over Culp's Hill. This, during these beautiful moonlight nights, is an unnecessary hardship to the youth of the community and we suggest with a feeling of relief that the wildcat was not wild but a poor tame cat having a fit. ## COMPROMISE ON WOOL TARIFF

Conferees Decide on 29 Per Cent. Ad Valorem.

MAY ADJOURN NEXT WEEK

An Early Agreement on the Farmers' Free List Bill is Also Expected and Congress Will Then Adjourn.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The entire conference committee of the house and senate on the wool tariff revision bill agreed on a flat rate of 29 per cent. on raw wool.

The committee also agreed on the house classification of wool.

The agreement on these two points seemed to remove the greatest obstacles in the way of final compromise.
As a result of the agreement on wool and expected understanding on the farmers' free list, expectation of an early agreement was revived. It is said the two tariff measures will be sent to the president Monday, his veto messages are looked for immediately after, and adjournment of the extraordinary session may come next Wednesday. If there is a slight hitch, the end of the session is expected Thursday or Saturday at the latest.

The compromise came out of negotiations between Senator La Follette, insurgent Republican, and Representative Oscar Underwood, the Democratic leader of the house.

The original house bill bearing Mr.
Underwood's name provided for a duty of 29 per cent. on raw wool and the La Follette bill, passed by the senate, placed this duty at 35 per cent. The average between these two would therefore be 32 per cent. so that apparently Senator La Follette has scored more heavily than Mr. Underwood in the negotiations.

The other duties in the wool tariff bills usually conform to that on raw wool.

Soon after the conferees met it was learned definitely that Representative Underwood and Senator La Follette had been only 2 1/2 per cent. apart on raw wool. Mr. Underwood held out for a duty of 27 1/2 per cent. ad valorem, while Mr. La Follette insisted upon 30 per cent. The full committee split the difference and compromised on 29 per cent.

The farmers' free list bill, it was said, could be agreed upon in short order, but there seemed to be a disposition in the conference to hold it back until an agreement was forced on wool.

As agreed on, the classification by the conference provision of the wool bill reads:

"On wool of the sheep, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, and other like animals, and on all wools and hair on the skin of such animals, the duty shall be 29 per cent. ad valorem."

The La Follette bill called for two classes of wool—wool and hair on the skin being in a second class—whereas the house provision, accepted by the conference, provides for only one class for all wools.

Under the compromise the second senate class of wools, fixed in the senate bill at 10 per cent., is thus increased to 29 per cent. These are the coarse or carpet wools.

Much time was spent in comparing the difference. In the beginning of the conference Mr. La Follette urged 30 per cent. on ordinary raw wool, and Mr. Underwood asserted that he could not exceed the instructions of the ways and means committee not to consent to a higher duty than 27 1/2 per cent.

There was much wrangling over the classification. Ultimately, Mr. Bailey suggested a compromise of 28 1/2 per cent. Immediately Mr. Underwood said he would accept 29 per cent., if the house classification should prevail. Mr. La Follette assented and it was agreed to.

Continuing its work the conference fixed the rate on wool wastes, noils and shoddies at 29 per cent. to correspond with the rate on regular wastes. This was an increase over the house rate, which was 20 per cent.

The conferees fixed the duty on combed wool, tops, etc., at 34 per cent., an increase of 9 per cent. over the house rate, and a decrease of 5 per cent. from the senate rate. On yarns, the rate was made 39 per cent., against the house rate of 30 and the senate rate of 45.

lost throne.

His forces, it is stated, have captured the town of Semnan, which is 110 miles from the capital, Tehran.
The former shah's troops, if they decide to march for the capital, will reach it in four days.

GET KIDNAPPED BOY AND ARREST TWELVE

Chicago Lad Stolen by Black Hand Gang Recovered.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Angelo Mareno, a boy, kidnapped by Black Hand blackmailers last Saturday, was found by the police within a few blocks of his home.

Nine men and three women were arrested in connection with the abduction.

Those under arrest are: Mrs. Bianca Cudroma, Joseph Nicolosi and his wife, Carmelo Nicolosi and his wife, Peter Nota, Tony Nota, Joseph Tadio, Joseph Cima, Ignatz Colura, Tony Canzi and Charles Cairra.

Mrs. Joseph Nicolosi, says Inspector Revere, was the go-between who obtained the $500 from Mareno. She first went to Mareno, telling him that she could get the money to the kidnappers.

Until that time Mareno had been unable to communicate with the kidnappers, for in the three letters which they sent him no place for a meeting was designated, the only instructions being to make for "a friend."

Acting under Revere's instructions, Mareno paid Mrs. Nicolosi $500, after the father of the missing boy declared he could not obtain the $500 ransom at first demanded by the kidnapers.
Revere had the bills marked before they were given to Mrs. Nicolosi.

The Nicolosis have been suspected by the police in previous blackmailing plots in the north side Italian colony. Gianni Alongi, recently convicted in the federal court on charges of blackmailing Chicago Italians by means of Black Hand threats, made his headquarters in the Nicolosi saloon.

MEAT PRICES TO GO UP

Dealers Say Last Fall's High Water
Mark May Be Passed.

New York, Aug. 12.—Prices of beef are to be raised and local retail dealers say the advance makes the cost of meat pass the high water mark of last fall.

Prices have been steadily advancing for two weeks, and the wholesalers say another advance is to come. The wholesale price of hindquarters of beef has jumped from 11 to 14 cents, while pork loins have gone up from 10 to 15 cents.

Wholesalers say the cause of the present advance is the scarcity of good cattle in the west and southwest.

Hatchet Shaves Off Hair.

Vineland, N. J., Aug. 12.—A hatchet slipping from the hand of a workman struck Contractor Ritchie on the back of the head and cleaned off the hair and the flesh the full width of the blade. Dr. George Cunningham drew the skin and hair back into place and says they will grow fast again.

Suicide Kills Horse First.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 12.—First shooting his favorite horse, with which he had driven to the place, Hiram Warner, a Carbonate business man, committed suicide at Newton Lake. He had been brooding over sickness in his family.

DIAZ REFUSES TO HEAR CALL

Unresponsive to Requests That He Return to Mexico.

POLITICAL POT IS BOILING

Anti-Reelectionist Clubs Abandon Madero and Will Nominate Francisco Gomez for President.

Lucerne, Switzerland, Aug. 12.— General Porfirio Diaz, former president of Mexico, who is here, has received many cablegrams from opponents of Francis I. Madero, urging him to return to Mexico and restore order.

One message from the Mexican Society of New York informs the deposed executive that the society is getting up a huge petition begging him to intervene in the Mexican disorders. The society has re-elected Diaz as president.

General Diaz does not heed these communications and is looking for a villa, with the object of remaining here until the end of the season.

Gomez to Oppose Madero.

Mexico City, Aug. 12.—Following the abandonment of Francisco I. Madero's standard by the anti-relectionists, in reply to his virtual repudiation recently of that organization, a call was sent out to all the anti-relectionist clubs for a convention on August 15 to nominate a new national ticket, of which Francisco Vasquez Gomez, minister of foreign affairs, is slated to be the head.

The delegates at the meeting claimed to represent 298 out of the total of 357 delegates. The opposition was precipitated by Madero's efforts to slide the political clubs into a nationalist party to be known as the Constitutional Progressive party.

The anti-relectionists demanded that Madero make a campaign as their candidate in conformity with his nomination by them, in the convention of April, last year, and abandon the idea of a nomination by the new party convention which has been called for August 27.

The delegates listened for hours to fervid oratory, in the course of which Madero was called a traitor to his friends, and his new supporters described as "modern cientificos."

Reyes' Son-in-Law Killed in Quarrel.

Monterey, Mex., Aug. 12.—Fermín
E. Sada, son-in-law of General Bernardo Reyes, was killed here by Luis C. Reyes, also related to General Reyes. The killing occurred in the offices of the Torre smelter, where Sada was cashier and Reyes bookkeeper. Differences over office matters caused the quarrel.

BAILEY AGAIN RESIGNS

Not From the Senate This Time, But
From the Monetary Commission.

Washington, Aug. 12.—Senator Bailey, of Texas, resigned from the national monetary commission and his resignation was accepted.

He announced that he would have objected to the majority report and that, if the commission should be discharged by December 4, as proposed by Senator Cummins, it would not give him time to prepare his dissenting report.

In the closing hours of the last congress Mr. Bailey resigned as senator, because his party colleagues fought hard for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico as states under what he declared, so far as Arizona was concerned, was an un-republican form of government. He thought better of that and recalled his resignation.

A few weeks ago Mr. Bailey resigned as a member of the committee on privileges and elections because of the manner senatorial investigations were conducted.

GETS EARTHQUAKE SCARE

Shock at San Bernardino, Cal., Sends People Into Streets.

San Bernardino, Cal., Aug. 12.—The most severe earthquake shock felt in this vicinity in years shook the business buildings last evening with such severity that the occupants fled into the streets. The damage was trivial.
A previous shock had been felt in the morning.

Los Angeles Has Slight Shock.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 12.—A slight earthquake shock was felt here.

Five Men Drown.

Hope, B. C., Aug. 12.—Five unidentified men were drowned in the Fraser river. They were part of a gang attempting to place a cable across the river. The five were in a small boat and were overcome by the current.
This makes a total of eight persons drowned since the beginning of preparations for railway construction from Hope northeastward.

Loses Finger From Rat Bite.

Mount Holly, N. J., Aug. 12.—About a week ago, Jackson L. Nippins, of Eastampton township, was bitten by a rat. Complications that developed made it necessary to amputate the end of his finger, as dry rot turned the finger black and made it dead.

STEEL PROBERS TO SUBPOENA MORGAN

Financier Will Return From Europe Next Week.

Washington, Aug. 12.—When J.
Pierpont Morgan arrives at quarantine on the huge steamship Olympic, which is due in New York on Wednesday next, he will be welcomed by members of his family.

Among those who will have a personal interest in him will be probably a suave gentleman who will hand the big financier a subpoena requesting his attendance at a meeting of the Stanley investigating committee.
Although it is clearly understood that Mr. Morgan is perfectly willing, though not anxious, to tell the committee all he knows about the formation of the United States Steel corporation, the Tennessee Coal and Iron deal, the profits of the Morgan firm, the part which Mr. Morgan, George W. Perkins and others actually played in the increase and issuance of stocks and bonds and incidentally the payment of personal and corporate campaign contributions, Mr. Morgan possesses intimate knowledge of all these matters, and some members of the committee believe that he will not, even in these days of exciting hunts for big game, ask for an immunity bath.

On several occasions Mr. Morgan has been summoned before congress and other investigations and at no time has he evinced a lack of candor or given the impression that there was any mental reservation which he was determined his inquirers should not fathom. Even on details, sometimes complex and irritating, he has exhibited a readiness to tell all he knows, and as a rule has spoken with unerring accuracy. Some of the members of the Stanley committee do not know Mr. Morgan, and it is probable they have not seen him. They do not,
of course, doubt his reported willingness to appear before them, but it would seem that they desire to adopt the usual course of subpoena service.
So far as can be learned here, none
of the other members of the Morgan firm has been subpoenaed. Much will depend upon Mr. Morgan's testimony as to whether they will be.

AUTOMOBILE KILLS WOMAN

Steps From One Machine in Front of Another and Neck is Broken.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 12.—Stepping from an automobile bus directly in front of a touring car of the Lytle Car company, Mrs. Michael Murphy, of Minersville, was run over.

Her neck was broken and she died an hour later. George Godfrey, driver of the car which struck her, surrendered himself and was placed under $300 bail. Witnesses say the car was traveling slowly and that the woman became confused. The car was stopped at the front wheel had passed over Mrs. Murphy.

So far as can be learned here, none
of the other members of the Morgan
firm has been subpoenaed. Much
will depend upon Mr. Morgan's testimony as to whether they will be.

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue.
Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five, while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of souring quickly. This objection has been overcome, and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the addition of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles.
Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from falling out and make it grow.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1911.

On Thursday, the 17th day of August, 1911, the undersigned, administrator of the estate of John H. Gilliland, late of Straban township, Adams County, Pa., deceased, will sell at public sale, by virtue of an order of the Orphan's Court of Adams County, the following described valuable real estate:

A farm situated in Straban township, along the Carlisle road, three miles north of Gettysburg, adjoining lands of Walter Snyder, James Eicholtz, Wesley Oyler and Frank Sionaker, and containing two hundred and twenty-five acres more or less. It contains thirty acres of valuable timberland, with white oak, hickory and walnut.

The improvements consist of a large brick house with water and bath; large barn with water in stables and entries, extra large wagon shed, new hog-pen, dairy, mill, scales, hen and smoke houses. These buildings are all slate or metal roofed. The water supply is one of the best obtainable, with two wind pumps and large storage reservoir furnishing water at twelve different points on the tract. The land is in a high state of cultivation, tile drained and has been well cared for. The farm has never been under rent, and very little rough feed has been sold from it.

It is well adapted to stock raising, having a stream of water flowing through
it. This farm would not be for sale except on account of the death of the owner, having been fitted up for a home. Persons wishing to view

MY AEROPLANE ADVENTURES

By J. ARMSTRONG DREXEL

II.—My Closest Calls In the Air

(Copyright, 1911, by Henry M. Neely. Copyright in Great Britain and Canada. All rights reserved.)

Every man who flies there comes the moment when fate hangs by a hair's breadth one way or the other means life or death. I know of nothing in human experience which can leave so indelible an impression in so short a space of time. With the aeroplane as it is built today these critical moments are really only the infinitesimal fraction of a moment. The danger is reached and in a flash it is passed—safely or otherwise. There is no time for thinking. Everything must be done by instinct.

True, we do make voluntary and logical movements when we get into these scrapes, but I believe that these movements are always made too late to do any real good and that the first instinctive motion, without reason and without thought, is what decided the outcome of the moment.

Sometimes we have a warning of what is coming, and in such instances we can prepare ourselves and meet the danger with a plan of action logically thought out and calculated to meet the vere a strain on the planes that it is extremely dangerous.

I think, on this day I speak of, that I was turning the machine in her own length or even shorter. I was paying not the slightest attention to the angle at which I was flying; all my thoughts were on the little circles I was cutting through the air, when suddenly I felt myself slipping on my seat, and I realized in a flash that my planes were dangerously near the perpendicular.

There was no time to think. One instant more and she would have lost her balance and come crashing down sideways to the ground 150 feet below.

Instinctively I threw my weight to the high side. My hand at once touched the bottom of the framework—a circumstance that will give some idea of my great angle. I took my feet from the steering lever, braced the left one against the side of the framework, shoved the steering post over with my knees to warp the left wing and help to right her and then—I closed my eyes and waited for things to happen.

But, fortunately for me, I had done the right things just in the nick of time. An infinitesimal fraction of a was debating whether to try for any more altitude with the darkness of evening gathering when my engine began to sputter and miss in a way that sounded as though there were no more gasoline in the tank.

This, however, I knew could not be the cause of the trouble. The tank had been well filled before I started, and what the trouble was I have never ascertained, but I felt the power beginning to give out, and I shoved my steering post forward just about in time to get the machine's nose pointed down when the engine stopped entirely. There was nothing for it but to plane down and get as near back home as possible.

With the machine pointed right for a long spiral glide, I looked below to get my bearings, and that is where I got my first fright. The mists had gathered so thickly that I could not see a single glimpse of the earth. There was nothing below me but a billowy sea of clouds, impenetrable to the eye.

I blamed myself in forcible language for my folly in not taking more careful note of my position on the upward climb. Now it was too late. I had not the slightest idea what part of the country I was over nor in what direction I was headed, but I had all I could do to take care of the machine, rushing downward through space as I was at the rate of seventy miles an hour or more. I thought of nothing except the steering and instinctively tried to keep her going in a general way in about the same wide circles that I had followed on my journey up.

Saved by a Fluke.

Soon I entered the clouds and began to catch glimpses of the earth. I thought I saw something that looked like one of the buildings on our grounds, and I steered accordingly, aiming to plane down so as to have plenty of room in the open land that stretched for miles away from the hangars.

Suddenly I plunged through the mists into the ordinary atmosphere of the earth's surface, and below me, there was nothing but trees, trees, trees, as far as the eye could reach. I seemed to be directly over the heart of a limitless wood. To land in the branches meant certain wreck. I had no power in the engine to give me a chance to look about me for an opening. There was nothing to do apparently but to plunge down among the forest giants and trust to luck that the wreck of the machine would not cut me up badly and that my fall from the top of whatever tree I landed in would leave my features in good enough shape for identification at the inquest.

I took a deep swoop downward and then desperately turned the aeroplane's nose upward to coast as high as the momentum would take me and search for a clearing in this momentary respite.

I plunged downward for a hundred feet at a terrible rate; then at the moment of turning up my heart nearly stopped beating as I heard a choking cough from the engine, then another, then another, and suddenly the br-r-r of the cylinders as the explosions came with full force, and the propeller, getting its grip on the air, put on all its power, and I climbed safely away from the treetops, everything working perfectly and once more in control of a safe and efficient piece of machinery. I sailed close to the ground until I recognized some houses over the edge of the wood. I was more than twenty miles from home; but, with the engine working smoothly, the trip back was mere child's play, and I was soon on the ground again, being alternately cursed and hugged by Mac, while the mechanics trundled the Bleriot to the hangar.

The Eternal Question.

They are never pleasant to talk about—these narrow escapes. It is best to forget about them as soon after they have occurred as possible, for they get on the nerves, and things that get on the nerves are not good in aviation. It has always struck me as odd that almost the first question the average man will ask after he has met me is:

This is simply another manifestation of that morbid desire for thrills at another man's expense by demanding feats the aeroplane was never intended to perform. The aeroplane has its limitations, and they are, so far, very narrow ones. It will do certain simple things very well and if not pushed too hard is not a great deal more dangerous than manufacturing dynamite or being picked out by the Black Hand.

The late Ralph Johnstone recognized this clearly, and he once said, "It will get us all some day." "It" got him just as it has got many another good man who is trying to advance the new science, but these are the things that it is best for us not to think about.

I remember when the first news of Johnstone's death reached me. I was dining with Grahame-White in Philadelphia. White had had a hard afternoon flying in the teeth of a ducky wind that would have kept any other man safely housed in the hangar.

Reporters wanted to know if it would keep White from flying next day.

"No," said White. "These things cannot stop us. We must do our work just the same. But such accidents bring home to us the awful danger that we are constantly running, and we have to keep constantly pushing such thoughts out of our minds."

Yet, as I say, the average man after he has talked to an aviator five minutes, will ask:

SAYS PUBLICITY WOULD CURE ILLS

Perkins Suggests Federal Registration For Trusts.

SEEKS TO CURE TRADE ILLS

Littleton Promises Congress Will Make a Sweeping Industrial Probe. Will Bring Capital and Labor Together.

Washington, Aug. 12.—George W. Perkins, the New York financier, suggested to the Stanley "steel trust" investigation committee that a government commission, which would insure focusing the limelight of publicity on the business affairs of great corporations, would do much to eradicate present day trust evils and preserve their virtues.

Following Mr. Perkins' suggestion, Representative Littleton, of New York, announced that a resolution soon would be introduced in congress providing for a thorough investigation of the industrial situation of the country.

"I am advised," said Mr. Littleton, "that there is to be a thorough inquiry into all the commercial ills of the nation, and that a conference will be called to determine the problem of how to deal with the industrial situation in America."

"It is a project that will involve a most drastic investigation, and bring together capital and labor in an effort, without bias, to find out just what should be done."

"That is the best news that I have heard," said Mr. Perkins.

For Bureau of Registry.

Mr. Perkins made his suggestion in response to a question by Mr. Bartlett.

"I believe the mere question of limelight is an important thing," said Mr. Perkins. "The limelight I firmly think would eradicate many of our troubles."

"If we had a law providing that a corporation engaged in interstate business could register itself with a bureau in Washington, submitting its operations, its prices, its balance sheets, its methods, its treatment of labor, etc., and that if these reports were made public, thus gaining the confidence of the public in the securities of that corporation, the confidence of the competitor that he was being fairly treated, and the confidence of the consumer that he was being fairly dealt with—I think that very soon all corporations would register themselves until we would have that kind of publicity which would go a long way to eradicate the evils of our great corporations and preserve the good that already is self-evident in these corporations."

"Such a bureau or commission should conduct its affairs in the limelight," commented Representative Young, "and not as some of the bureaus of this government are conducted behind closed doors."

Members of the committee and Mr. Perkins applauded this suggestion, the utterance being directed toward the bureau of corporations, which has withheld information about the steel trust from the committee.

"Do you think," Representative Littleton asked Mr. Perkins, "that it would be possible, in attempting to cure these evils, to get uniform state action regarding incorporation laws?"

"I think that would be utterly impossible at least within a reasonable time," Mr. Perkins answered.

"Do you know that the conference of governors, recently inaugurated, and called to meet soon, could possibly, by persuasion, bring about in the various states an initial safeguard in incorporation laws?" Littleton continued. "I doubt it, though the conference of governors has done some very good work," said Mr. Perkins.

After four days of grilling, Mr. Perkins was excused, having established a record for length of testimony. Oakleigh Thorne, president of the Trust Company of America, followed him as a witness.

Thanksgiving Day on November 30.

Washington, Aug. 12.—President Taft, it was learned, will designate Thursday, November 30, as Thanksgiving day this year. It always has been the custom to fix the last Thursday in the month. This year there had been some doubt because November happened to include five instead of four Thursdays.

MAGEE IS REINSTATED

Phillies' Star Outfielder May Don Uniform Wednesday.

New York, Aug. 12.—The suspension against Sherwood Magee, the outfielder of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, has been lifted, and he will be allowed to get into the game again with his club when the Phillies resume play on their home field, next Wednesday.

President Lynch, of the National League, made this announcement, at the same time giving out a letter he had forwarded to Magee, in which the temporary character of the reinstatement is emphasized. The player's future good behavior will be the determining feature, President Lynch says. Magee was indefinitely suspended last month as a result of his assault on Umpire Pinneran during a game with St. Louis in Philadelphia on July 10. Later the suspension was fixed for the remainder of the playing season.

POPE IMPROVES, STILL IS WEAK

Is Unable to Combat General Debility.

Rome, Aug. 12.—The improvement in the condition of the pope increased. His temperature fell from 100 to nearly normal. At the same time his pains were less severe and the pontiff was able to take more nourishment.

The improvement in the condition of Pope Pius was not so great as had been hoped for. However, his physicians appeared gratified that their patient was no worse.

In addition to the physicians and his sisters, the pope saw Cardinal Merry Del Val, the papal secretary of state, and Mgr. Bissleti, major domo of the Vatican. They found his holiness more cheerful and in a jocular frame of mind.

He commented with amusement on some of the stories circulated about his condition, saying:

"I intend to get well in spite of them."

"I KEPT DRAWING CLOSER AND CLOSER ABOUT THE CENTER, FLYING AT A GREAT ANGLE ALL THE TIME."

emergency in the best way. At other times the danger comes and is past before we really realize what is happening, and in these instances it is only the instinct that comes with long training in flying that pulls us through in safety.

I have personally had many thrilling experiences in the air, but there are two instances that have left upon my memory stronger impressions than all the others. I regard them as my two closest calls.

Both of these thrilling moments came to me while I was flying for practice at my school at Beaulieu, near Southampton, England. My partner, MacArdie, and I have an ideal flying grounds there. It is seven miles from the railroad station, with perfectly flat country, smooth and clear except for one line of telegraph wires.

My Closest Call of All.

My closest call came to me in a most undramatic way. There were no spectators save only MacArdie and our mechanics, and I think that Mac was the only one of them who really saw my danger and knew that he was near to losing a partner.

I was flying low with the Bleriot XI, with the antiquated type of wings. I started to circle the place in wide, easy curves, without any definite object in view. I found the machine was banking well at the turns, and I became curious to see just how small a loop I could make with her, so I gradually narrowed the circle in which I was flying. There seemed no limit to her possibilities; I felt as though I could turn her on her beam ends if I wanted to, and so, without the slightest thought of danger, I kept drawing closer and closer about the center, flying at a great angle all the time because the circle had become so small that there was no straightaway flight. It was a case of jam the rudder over hard and see how close she would come about.

It may be well to explain that the Bleriot banks automatically when going about a turn—that is, the far side rises and the near side falls until the machine is frequently tilted at an angle of forty-five degrees. This can, of course, be prevented by warping the wings and keeping her on a more even keel, but to do this puts so se-second later would have been useless, for I am convinced that I caught the machine just as she was passing the critical angle, after which there would have been nothing to support her in the air, and I should have gone crashing downward. As swiftly as it had come the danger had passed; the machine had righted herself, and I opened my eyes to find myself sailing away on an even keel—safe, alive, and thanking God for it.

I looked beneath me and saw that the mechanics were gazing up at me with no idea of what I had just passed through. Mac, however, looked as white as a ghost. He knew.

Naturally my nerves were about gone. My heart was thumping like a triphammer, and I could scarcely get my breath from the excitement. But I made up my mind that Mac was not going to see me quit, so, as though I went sailing away to the far side of the grounds and came back again in wide, easy, sweeping curves that landed me at the feet of my excited partner in perfect style.

I did not fly again that day.

Lost In Cloudland.

My other narrow escape was the result of a fluke, and I was saved by a fluke. To this day I have not been able to figure out why either of the dukes happened. I was practicing at Beaulieu for height; altitude work had attracted me from the beginning, and I practiced constantly. In fact, I had several times exceeded the world's record for height as it stood then, but could not claim it officially, as I used my own barograph and aneroid and the flights were made with Mac and the mechanics as the only watchers.

On this day I went up toward evening. It was one of those gray days with a thin mist over everything and a damp feeling in the air that suggested an impending fog. I should have known better than to attempt to climb under such conditions, but I was keyed up to it and I did not want to put it off.

The mechanics turned the propeller over and I was off. The engine was running with that smooth purring that is music to the ears of an aviator, and without any incident whatever I climbed to something like 6,000 feet, which was then above the record, and

PETRIFIED TREES.

The "Stone Forest" One of California's Natural Wonders.

California, among many other natural wonders, contains a "stone forest." This is located in Sonoma county, only a few miles from the little resort of Calistoga Springs. This "forest" consists of a great many petrified trees, all of which are prehistoric.

In respect to the great number of petrified trees and their immense size, the California "stone forest" surpasses that of Arizona. Strange to say, very little is known about these wonderful Sonoma county petrifications—so far as the general public is concerned. Many of these trees are of enormous size. The famous "Queen of the Forest" is a prehistoric redwood about eighty feet long and nearly twelve feet in diameter. It has been broken in several places, and these breaks are as clean as if cut off with a saw. A tree has grown up through one of the breaks and has attained quite a large size. Another giant tree known as the "Monarch" lies near by, which is almost ninety feet long and is without a break. This tree is a fir, and averages ten feet in diameter. Not far away is another giant son of the forest—a redwood that is about sixty feet long and nine feet in diameter. This tree is broken into many hundreds of pieces, yet it retains its shape almost perfectly. Scattered about for the area of several acres are many other pieces of petrification. So perfect has been the transmutation into stone that the grain of the wood still remains very clear, and the variety of the tree may be easily determined.—Scientific American.

THE OLD LIBERTY BELL.

History of This Relic of the Revolutionary Patriots.

Overvigorous ringing of the old Liberty bell many years ago on the occasion of the celebration of the Declaration of Independence was what put the crack in it and forever destroyed its resonant tone. It was cast by Pass & Stow in Philadelphia and hung in the belfry of the now historic statehouse in lower Chestnut street early in June, 1753. It contains 2,080 pounds of metal.

Near the top of the bell were cast the words "Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land Unto All the Inhabitants Thereof." Prophetic of its destiny, this gave it the name Liberty bell.

When the British army marched on Philadelphia in 1777 the bell was taken down by patriots and carried off in the night to Allentown in order that it might not fall into the hands of the enemy. In 1781 it was returned to the tower of the statehouse.

For more than half a hundred years thereafter the bell was rung and honored on Independence day every year before the crack appeared in it. An effort was made to restore its tone by sawing the crack wider, but this proved of no avail. The bell was finally removed from the tower to a lower story of the statehouse and used only on extraordinary occasions. Subsequently it was rigged up on its original timbers in the vestibule. In 1893 it was exhibited at the Columbian exposition in Chicago.

An Escape

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Our family has occupied the same house in London for several centuries, and the upper stories are crowded with heirlooms and old papers. This continued residence is remarkable, for there has never been a political disturbance in the kingdom in which at least one of my race did not take part. In nosing over an old letter written by one of my quarrelsome ancestors to his mother I found the following story:

Heaven keep you, my dear mother, and may the joy of getting this letter and the news contained in it not be too much for you, seeing that your son is out of reach of harm in this pleasant land of France, a land that I shall always love, since its grapes or, rather, the wine made from their juice is at the bottom of my escape. Had it not been for an idea put in my head by the wine I had in the cellar of the Tower I would now be without a head, like the duke of Monmouth) in whose stupid effort to take the throne from his uncle, King James, I was much mixed.

You know that, being a man of rank, yet not a leader in the rebellion, I was accorded the privileges usually granted to such persons, being lodged with the lieutenant of the Tower himself and as fine a fellow as ever served his sovereign. From the first I felt sure I would keep my head on my shoulders, and if I didn't I was bound to enjoy what little time was left me. The lieutenant and I were kindred spirits, and many were the cups of October ale we drank together, he always giving the toast, "May your head never roll into a basket, but may you meet the death of a nobleman, falling before a pike or a sword."

I had the wine you sent me down in the cellar under the Tower in which are the lieutenant's quarters, and one day while drinking with my jailer, we getting tired of ale, I told him that I had some fine French wine in the cellar and if he would let me send my man for it I would open a bottle. He gave the permission and the cellar key, and calling Jacob, I gave him the key and told him to go for a bottle. I also tipped him a knowing look.

It was only a look, and I never dreamed that a look and a key would tell him what I wished to say to him, but couldn't speak for the presence of the lieutenant. But when a man is waiting to have his head topped off he will cling to any straw of hope, and so did I. Jacob was gone a long while, but in time came to the door and instead of handing in a bottle stood without, his clothes hanging on his arm. I knew what this meant, and quick as a flash I moved the key of the door from the inside to the outside and locked it, shutting in the lieutenant.

I began at once putting on Jacob's clothes, and he began putting on mine. While he was doing so he told me why he had been so long. He had told the man on guard that he had the key to the cellar where the wine was kept and if he would come with him he might have all he wished to drink. When Jacob got the guard in the cellar he opened a bottle of the wine and told him to drink quick because I was waiting for him to come with wine and he couldn't be too long. The man drank two bottles as fast as he could pour their contents down, then fell on the floor. Jacob locked him in.

I was but a few minutes getting on Jacob's breeches and doublet and, putting on his hat, pulled it down over my face. Then, pretending to be drunk with liquor, I staggered out into the courtyard, and, passing over the spot where two of King Harry's wives were beheaded, I walked past the sentry at the postern, those I met laughing at me for a sot. I was obliged to pass over Tower hill, where stood a scaffold that had for weeks been used for beheading such rebels as I and, tottering down into the frequent streets, lost myself in the crowd.

Luck helped me, for no one saw me to know me, though I saw some I knew. I thought of going home to hide, but knew I would be sought there and pushed on, moving by the outskirts till I reached the east side of the town, when I pushed off through the country toward the coast.

But I did not go directly east, for I wished to see my sweetheart at Link-born manor and give her a kiss before putting the sea between her and me. Besides relieving her mind as to the home of still keeping my head and body together. It was evening when I came to the manor, and Margaret was walking among the flowers. She was languid and drooping, for she had been told that I would be brought to the block in a few days. When she saw me coming in Jacob's clothes she knew his doublet and gave a cry, thinking he was bringing her news of me. Staggering toward me, she fell fainting in my arms. I kissed her back to life, and when she opened her eyes she was looking into mine.

But there was little time, for I knew they would seek me where she was, and I begged her to get me some food in a napkin while I went to the stable and got out a horse. When one was saddled I rode out, met her with the virginals, bent down and kissed her, then, giving the horse the spurs, galloped away.

And here I am in France, dear mother, ready to get my head in jeopardy again.
